Does your building pass OSHA's fall-protection rule?

An inspector doesn't need a complaint to open a case — and not being cited yet isn't the same as being compliant.

Know where you stand — before an inspector does.

OSHA's fall-protection emphasis program lets an inspector open a case the moment they spot an unprotected edge or an uncertified anchor — no complaint required. A serious citation runs about $16,500; a willful or repeat one up to roughly $165,000, per violation.

We self-perform the concrete, coating, drainage and fall-protection work — including Complete Building Code Compliant Recertifications; a FL State Certified Engineer seals the certification.
